A Jeffers-designed home inside The Pacific condominium complex

JAY JEFFERS

When sophisticated Bay Area denizens are in need of a cool, masculine mix of new eclectic pieces and antique treasures, they turn to Jay Jeffers. New to his many spectacular projects, he has recently completed several custom homes for The Pacific, a luxurious new condominium complex in Pacific Heights. He has a special relationship with San Francisco's Dolby Chadwick Gallery and often infuses his spaces with art from the gallery and commissioned pieces. To see his work up close and personal, head to Wildhawk, the PlumpJack Group's newest bar in the Mission, which Jeffers expertly outfitted with emerald green velvet chairs, zebra-print stools, and black-and-white floral wallpaper. Another place to take in the Jeffers brand? The Store, Jeffers' Tenderloin boutique, which is filled with sophisticated bar accessories, interesting wall decor, and plush throws.
