BY KHADEJAH KHAN / NOVEMBER 15, 2021

Why should walls get all the love? We tapped designers across the country to make the case for the painted ceiling. Here are the top takeaways to ensure your commitment to color—whether neutral or bold—masterfully extends to the fifth wall.

“A brightly colored ceiling can liven up a living room or office, while a dark ceiling is perfect for a cozy, moody bedroom,” says San Francisco designer Jay Jeffers, whose moody go-to is Midnight Blue by Benjamin Moore. (Photo: Matthew Millman)

THE GUIDING WORDS:

“Typically, social rooms, such as a living room or dining room, are complemented by warm colors like yellow, coral or cranberry. Smaller, private rooms, such as the bedroom or powder room, are complemented by cooler shades like sage-green, violets and blues.”—Jay Jeffers, Jay Jeffers
